

Traditional Brass Hardware Solutions For Any Lifestyle

Because every family is different, their hardware should be, too. Classic Brass has been handcrafting solid brass traditional hardware for both cabinets and doors since the inception of the family-owned company in the 1950s. Available only through a very exclusive network of dealers, their products boast the high level of quality and technical detail that are created to please even the most discerning homeowner.

Each piece of solid brass and bronze hardware is finished by hand, featuring custom order options with a family touch. There are 24 standard finishes available to choose from, along with gold plating and custom variations. A hallmark of fine hardware, wax finishes are a highly popular option that offers an elegant, timeless look. A living finish is a non-lacquered and unprotected finish which will “wear and beautify” with time. Because each collection offers such a wide range of finish options as well as the ability to customize, you can rest assured knowing that the end result will be exactly what you are looking for.

Depending on your unique needs, all door hardware products are machined and finished to order. Because the process is designed around flexibility, there are virtually no limitations. Classic Brass is known for their ability to provide hardware for any application—this includes tubular, mortise, and multipoint locks. Additionally, they have the capability to provide clients with customized escutcheons. For many homeowners, narrow escutcheons are necessary due to narrow door stiles. All of these types of specific needs can be accommodated, offering distinct solutions for everyone. From custom hammered products and engraving requirements, to locks with unique spacing requirements—these are the types of special touches that simply cannot be found in a typical door hardware catalog.

Classic Brass is proud to introduce their newest collection of traditional door hardware—Chautauqua. The hallmark of this collection is the very fine and crisp bead, rope, coin, and cross hatch detail. Chautauqua is the only collection in the marketplace that offers a rope or coin edge on escutcheons, which complements the knobs, turn pieces, rose pieces, and levers.

In order to truly appreciate the level of technical detail and fine quality that Classic Brass collections possess, it's necessary to visit one of their exclusive dealer showrooms to see the products on display. The knowledgeable staff can discuss with you firsthand the flexibility available in the Classic Brass door hardware program. You can do this locally at Belmont Hardware. To see their products, you can visit the Belmont Hardware showrooms located in Belmont, San Francisco, and San Jose. When you visit one of Belmont Hardware's six showrooms, you will find Northern California's largest selection of the world's finest decorative finish hardware and plumbing fixtures. Belmont Hardware is family owned and has been a favored source of homeowners, architects, interior designers, and custom homebuilders for over 80 years. You can also visit Belmont Hardware's additional showrooms located in Novato, Walnut Creek and Fresno, featuring an extensive collection of products on display, or you can visit www.belmonthardware.com for additional information and more details.
